A/ DIRECTION: Read the passage below carefully then answer questions 1 – 7 according to the information in the passage.

Reading PASSAGE I

- 1 Child abuse is a phenomenon that knows no social, geographic or racial boundaries . It occurs in the best of families in wealthy suburbs and in rural areas as well. It is, in fact ,a national plague that experts say is likely to create another generation of child abusers in America from among those abused today.
- 2 For years , the problem was hidden behind the closed doors of houses or apartments. But, since the passage of laws in the 1970s requiring health and other professionals to report all cases of child abuse, a quiet revolution has been occurring . More cases of child abuse are being reported ,and social-warfare agencies are getting help for both the children and their parents. That is not to say ,however, that the reporting is in any way complete . More than ,5000 cases are reported annually to the Philadelphia Country Children and Youth Agency, but a spokes woman said. "There is a lot more out there that goes unreported. " Schools are just now beginning to focus on abuse, the spokeswoman said ."Out of the quarter-million kids, within the Philadelphia schools, we received only ,300 reports last year. However, the schools are making strides in this area " she added , To increase the frequency of reporting, institutions that come into contact with injured children are training staff members to recognize abuse. The tremendous amount of stress in today society-both within and outside the home -is considered one of the main factors in the rise of child abuse.
- 3 Poor marital relationship, single parenthood, social and economic problems, unemployment and social isolation add undue stress to our life. The problems of social isolation is critical. Today people are moving around and finding themselves living further away from their families and the emotional support which they provide ,Mothers find themselves living either in large city apartment complexes or suburban communities in which they know absolutely no one. In this lonely atmosphere, they try to deal with the pressure of being the parent of one ,two or three children.
- 4 Dr. Benjamin Price who sees at least one case of a child abuse a week in Einstein Hospital pediatric clinic or emergency room, believes that " parenting" should be a compulsory subject within the educational system. "If people were fully prepared to cope with the emotional demands of fatherhood or motherhood ,many of these problems would slowly decrease, " he said . " We cannot forget emotional abuse. It is harder to diagnose, but can be just as destructive to the child as any of the more dramatic cases involving burns, bruises or broken bones"
- 5 Most physicians and social workers who were interviewed agreed that child abuse and neglect are common. However , it is without a doubt more visible and more publicized today , child abuse is not a new phenomenon.

Infanticide, abandonment, beatings, mutilation all are a part of the history of child abuse. During the industrialization of America. Children as young as 5 years old worked 12 to 16 hours a day in factories and sweatshops. Such working conditions inspired the first welfare efforts to stem child abuse. In 1871, the first formally documented case of child abuse was recorded in the New York City. Until then no intervention had legally been possible. Between 1962 and 1967 , all 50 states passed laws requiring identification, reporting and treatment of child abuse by designated social service agencies. It was discovered , however that these laws were not sufficient. During the 1970s, they were revised to legally bind all professionals who work with children, including doctors , nurses and teachers to report any suspected case of child abuse or neglect.

6 Low income or unemployment increase the chances of violence, and child abuse by 45% higher among blue-collar parents of either sex than among white-collar parents. There are no significant difference between black and white parents in the rate of abusive violence . However , Jewish parents are reported to have the lowest rate violence. Members of minority religions have the highest. The likelihood of child abuse is lowered when both parents are of the same religion.

Passage - 2

C/ DIRECTION: read the passage below carefully then answer questions 24 – 34 according to the information in the passage.

1. The current school restructuring movement has school-based, shared, decision-making at its core. With the newly acquired autonomy, come new responsibilities. Teachers, local schools, and school districts are accountable to all stakeholders for the policy, programs, and practices they implement. It is not enough for teachers merely to make decisions; they will be called up on to make informed decisions, decisions which are data driven. Therefore, it is necessary for teachers to be much more deliberate in documentation and evaluation of their efforts. Action research is one means to that end. It is very likely that it is the emergence school-based decision making that has precipitated the resurgence of action research; the two seem to be complementary. Action research assists practitioners and other stakeholders in identifying the needs, assessing the development processes, and evaluation the outcomes of the changes, design, and implement. The self evaluation aspect of action research is congruent with the philosophies contained in the outcomes of education based movements currently being advanced.

2. The prevailing focus of teacher research is to expand the teachers' role as inquiries about teaching and learning through systematic classroom research. The approach is naturalistic, using participant observation techniques of ethnographic research, is generally collaborative, and includes characteristics of case study methodology.

3. Collaborative action research provides support and a forum for sharing questions, concerns, and results. Teachers advise each other and comment on the progress of individual efforts. Engaging in collaborative action research helps to eliminate the isolation that has long characterized teaching, as it promotes professional dialogue and thus, creates a more professional culture in schools. Action research comprises two terms: action and research that high light the essential features of this method that is, trying out ideas in practice as a means of increasing knowledge about improving curriculum, teaching and learning.

4. Action research has been employed for various purposes: for school-based curriculum development, as a professional development strategy, in pre-service and graduate courses in education, and in systems planning and policy development. Some writers Elliot (2001) advocate an action research approach for school restructuring. Action research can be used as evaluative too, which can assist in self-evaluation whether the self be an individual or an institution.

5. The school- based curriculum is a curriculum developed by the school where by the curriculum is going to be implemented. Action research is therefore used to assess the previous experience to identify the strengths and weaknesses by collecting data from teachers, students, parents, local community and other stakeholders to find ways of improving instruction in the particular context. As a professional development strategy, action research makes teachers not only to implement the objectives, contents, and methods of teaching given from the top or centrally, rather it keep teachers up-to-date. Because action research makes teachers revisit their previous experiences, problems that need a practical solution and continuously identifying areas that require improvements.
